War and Peace Simulation Competition

NATURE AND FORMAT OF COMPETITION

- The nature of Competition:

War and Peace Simulation Competition designed to augment the knowledge of International Humanitarian Law and further hone the skills of participants to apply norms of IHL to real-life situations in armed conflict situations (such as giving legal advice on targeting civilian objects, legitimacy of using civilians as human shield, the effect of bombing a bridge which is used to transport weapons to enemy troops but is also essential to the delivery of essential food supplies to the civilian population, etc.).

- The format of Competition:

A team shall consist of two participants. A problem shall be released/mailed beforehand, indicating certain war situations and challenges to humanitarian rules. The same problem shall be used as a ground to create simulated dialogue, negotiation and to raise claims or defend against key issues pertaining to humanitarian crisis. In a team, one participant will participate in a simulated capacity of a military commander and one as a legal advisor. The teams have to prepare short write-up concerning key issues of given problem, laws referred and evidences if any. The submission shall be prepared for both the sides of conflicting states given in a problem. The sides of team will be selected based on draw of lots on the day of competition. The performance of teams will be evaluated by judges on prescribed parameters.
